

ACADEMIC APPOINTMENT – CHAIR IN MINING LAW AND FINANCE

The Faculty of Law at Western University invites applications for the Chair in Mining Law and Finance, an endowed position made possible through a generous donation from Cassels Brock & Blackwell LLP to promote high-quality academic programming in this important field. Thanks to additional support from Western Law graduate Stephen Dattels (LLB '72), the Faculty has become a national leader in mining law and finance education.

We are seeking a strong researcher with a demonstrated or emerging international reputation who will help raise the profile of mining law and finance at Western and contribute to our broader strengths in business law. The successful candidate will bring a collaborative, interdisciplinary approach to their work and play a key role in shaping research, teaching, and public dialogue at the intersection of law, natural resources, financial systems, and the environment.

The appointment may be a probationary (tenure-track) position at the rank of Assistant Professor or Associate Professor, or a tenured appointment at the rank of Associate Professor or Professor, depending on qualifications and experience. Candidates may also be considered for a Limited Term appointment. The term for the Chair is five years, renewable.

Qualified applicants must hold a JD, LLB, or equivalent degree, as well as a relevant advanced graduate degree or equivalent. Candidates for a probationary appointment must demonstrate a superior academic record and strong potential for excellence in research and teaching. Candidates for a tenured appointment must have an outstanding academic record, a strong publication record, and significant teaching experience. Limited Term candidates should have advanced legal education or a substantial record of successful practice in fields relevant to mining law.

Western Law offers a robust mining law program, including a suite of academic courses and experiential learning opportunities. We regularly welcome leading scholars, practitioners, developers, regulators, and Indigenous and NGO leaders to engage with our students on key issues across the mining cycle. Our students benefit from interdisciplinary collaborations, including recent participation in the Khepri Asteroid Mining Mission, and have opportunities to engage with the broader mining community through our membership in the Foundation for Natural Resources and Energy Law and our active presence at the PDAC Convention.

The successful candidate will be expected to teach and mentor undergraduate and graduate law students, establish a productive research program, and provide leadership in mining law and finance initiatives. They will also have opportunities to collaborate with colleagues in Earth Sciences, Geography, Indigenous Studies, and the Ivey Business School, as well as with partners in the mining industry.
