Making Your Mark

The term 'International Law' was coined during the 18th Century by English philosopher Jeremy Bentham. But what is International Law? According to Bentham’s classic definition, international law is a collection of rules governing relations between states. However, since then the term has grown to mean so much more, and the original definition now appears to be largely irrelevant and outdated as it omits both individuals and international organizations — two vital and dynamic components of international law systems. The original appearance of the term International Law demonstrates just how much has evolved.

It is no longer accurate to view International Law as a simple collection of rules. The world is changing, and international actors, such as states and international organizations, now have the power to influence and shape domestic politics. The domestic politics of a state are no longer relevant only to that state and in some cases create impact that transcends borders. And so, in its broadest sense, International Law provides normative guidelines as well as methods, mechanisms and a common conceptual language to international actors.

Who is an international actor? Almost every organization, corporation, firm, and of course, every country around the world. Chances are, you’ll become an international actor throughout your career. As such, international experiences are increasingly valued by local employers who are seeking to create more diverse and global workplaces. The Western Law Internship Program (WLIP) is a unique opportunity for students who would like to explore the international aspect of law-making and law enforcement.

Participating in an International Law internship is incredibly valuable for personal and professional development and is certainly not only limited to those seeking to pursue a career in International Law. It is a worthwhile experience for students who enjoy learning about different cultures and comparing different legal systems. The WLIP program offers an opportunity to gain greater exposure to both practice and theory; to both pros and cons; to the highs and the lows of globalization — beneficial experience and insight that can help you along your way as you carve your career path and make your mark in this highly competitive, yet very exciting and rewarding, world of law.

If the Western Law Internship Program seems attractive to you, we encourage you to take advantage of this booklet and trust you will find it to be a helpful resource during the application process. The International Law Association is here to address all questions and concerns that arise as you consider applying and following through with the application process. Many thanks to the team for the amount of research and effort that went into this booklet, as well as to Professors Oosterveld, Carmody and others for their continuing guidance and support for Western Law students interested in the field. The International Law Association wishes you the best of luck as you plan for an amazing internship experience!

All the best in your future international endeavors,

Working in International Law

By: Chios Carmody

There’s a mystique about international law. To some people it means glamour: the travel, the banquets and glittering receptions. To others it means the exotic: the foreign destinations, the different languages and unfamiliar customs etc. To still others it means a supernatural degree of skill: after all, if international law is mainly about relations between governments, then it must be full of smart people involved in solving problems that affect large numbers of people. However you want to think about it, international law can seem far away. This is particularly true if you’re a student because, with your books and your loans and your Kraft Dinner, you’re probably wondering: “who would hire me to work in international law? I must be dreaming …”

Yes, you should be dreaming, and what I want to suggest here is that this wonderful and timely booklet, put together over the past few years by a succession of Western Law students and the WLIP committee, will help to make those dreams come true. They - and you - are to be commended for having gone beyond the stereotypes of international law and for allowing you to think that international law can be part of your life outside the classroom. This is true whether you’re planning to be a lawyer, an activist, or simply a concerned member of the global public. (You may even be one or some of these already!). What is being presented to you here are a range of opportunities to learn more about international law in practice. These are yours, and you should take a moment to familiarize yourself with them.

Of course, in preparation for doing this you might wonder what makes a good international lawyer. That’s a fair question. Sure, international law requires smarts, but probably no more than any other field of the law, and if you’re unsure about all of this, remember that you’ll develop your own expertise over time. What I’ve been asked to do here is to provide you some insights from my own career that may help you to find work and fulfilment in international law.

Before I do that, however, I want to share with you some impressions I have of people who work in international law. My sense is that they are generally people who enjoy the legal issues that arise in an international context. These are not only the classic legal issues of contract or tort encountered in domestic law, but also issues of obligation, jurisdiction, immunity, state responsibility and the use of force – issues that arise because of the state-centered nature of the international system. In that sense, working in international law may recall something of your constitutional and administrative law courses. There’s the constant presence of the state – this big, lumbering leviathan that is accorded certain privileges in international law much in the same way a family is accorded certain privileges in domestic law – all because, at base, it represents a community. We see it as somehow unique and different, with values that an individual would not necessarily possess and that in most instances need to be respected.

At the same time, my sense is that people who work in international law appreciate the unique context in which international legal issues may arise. It is a context that has become much more complex today because of the presence of so many non-state actors internationally. There are international organizations, individuals, non-governmental organizations (NGOs) and groups, as well as other affiliations. A person who enjoys all of this – who appreciates differences and who realizes that international law is not always the mirror of its domestic counterpart – will thrive in the field.

So how do you actually find work in international law? That was a question I asked myself two decades ago after graduating from law school and entering practice in downtown Toronto. By day I was an administrative lawyer, wearing a suit and working in a law firm, occasionally going to court and otherwise living my life. But that’s all that I was doing: I was living my life, and the days were passing, and deep inside me I had this gnawing sense that I was meant to do something else. The trouble was what?

1 This Introduction is dedicated to the memory of Lizann Patricia Foo, a 22-year-old Toronto university student who hoped to become a diplomat. Lizann was born into a large Indo-Guyanese family and immigrated to Canada when she was 6. She studied International Relations and in her spare time worked as a customs officer at Pearson International Airport in Toronto. Lizann passed away from cancer August 1, 2004.
I started to answer this question by looking around me. What was I doing? What did I like to do? International law certainly didn’t jump out at me from the get-go. At the same time I was living in an incredibly multicultural city. I’d been a good student at law school, but I wasn’t exceptional and my interests were varied. To get a better sense of myself I decided to start reading, and so on Friday afternoons as I headed home, I would stop at the Law Library and pick up a book or two that looked interesting. Over the course of several months I read through books on labour law and corporate law and bankruptcy until I hit on international law.

Now I have to admit that the words “international law” were a little intimidating to me – in fact, kind of like the imagery that I presented at the beginning of these remarks. Unfortunately, I’d had a rather uninspired instructor for my Public International Law course in law school and didn’t do well, so I sort of dismissed the whole area the way I wrongly dismissed a number of other subjects I hadn’t done well in. International law, in particular, seemed so distant, so impossible, and so glitzy to me – an administrative litigator in Toronto with two shabby suits - how would I ever get to work in international law?

That’s when I started reading. The first book I read – if I remember correctly – sometime in the spring of 1995 was John Dugard’s The Recognition of States in International Law, a book in which he examined the law and practice of state recognition. How and why did states recognize – or conversely not recognize – each other? It was a brilliant synthesis, and all of it was informed by Dugard’s own painful experience as a white anti-apartheid South African. That got me thinking about southern Africa, so I read a book by Lynn Berat on Walvis Bay, the South African administered enclave in Southwest Africa (today Namibia). My head swam with the tale of the murderous conflict between the German (and later South African) administrators and the native Herero people and all that had happened in that dusty land so far away. I was amazed at the way South Africa assumed possession of the only serviceable port on the Southwest African coast in order to maintain a stranglehold on the remainder of the territory – and asserted its right in international law to do so by purporting to annex Walvis Bay. I never imagined law – let alone international law – operating in such an environment. But it did. Then, for some weird reason, I got thinking about treaties and so I read Ian Sinclair’s dry text on the Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties, which was a solid introduction to the law, if not much else. Still, if I was going to know about international law, I had to know about treaties and so I had no regrets. Then I decided I should read something I’d really enjoy, so I read John Jackson’s The World Trading System: Law and Policy of International Economic Relations, and loved that. And so on it went.

Now you have to remember that at the time I was still in practice, riding the subway to work, my mind swimming with the Vienna Convention and the Herero as I tried to be an ordinary administrative lawyer. It was a strange existence, and it made me think carefully. I started to recognize why I went on Fridays to the newsstand in the BCE Place in downtown Toronto for the latest copy of The Economist, why I’d tried to write a novel in my articling year loosely based on a dispute between Thailand and Cambodia over an ancient temple that had ended up in the International Court (The Temple of Preah Vihear), why I’d always enjoyed meeting people from other cultures and learning foreign languages. It was starting to come together. I wanted to do more.

I decided to get involved in international law-related activities, and one of the first things I did was to join the International Section of the Ontario Bar Association. That exposed me to a range of people practicing in the field. I went to a number of activities they hosted. At that time the OBA was starting a new international law publication, The Canadian International Lawyer, and they needed a student editor, so I volunteered and worked on that in my spare time. I also started writing and wrote my first article about the proposed expulsion of Nigeria from the Commonwealth due to human rights abuses under the Abacha dictatorship. It later appeared in the Canadian Yearbook of International Law. I also got involved with the Canadian Institute for International Affairs.

All of these things were small things - essentially things that I did after work or on the weekend. Cumulatively, however, they were useful in helping me to identify whether international law was my thing and in introducing me to people who were already in the field. Many of these people were helpful, and their example convinced me that I could work in international law too. Little by little, I felt the trajectory of my life starting to change.

Shortly after that I realized I had to do something, and so over the course of two years I saved money and decided to get a Master’s of Law in International Law. In May 1996 I gave notice at my job, spent the summer finishing my Nigeria article, and then left for the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor, where I had a terrific year as the only Canadian among 30 foreign graduate students. I took all the courses I could in the field of international economic law – my area of particular interest – and wrote three papers, one of which was accepted for publication in the Michigan Journal of International Law. I also participated in a law and development project, helping to draft a new electoral statute for Cambodia.

The following summer – the summer of 1997 – I stayed in Ann Arbor working as a research assistant for the professor who ultimately became my dissertation supervisor in the doctorate, which I began in the fall of 1997 at Georgetown University Law Center in Washington, D.C. Washington was a terrific place to live in for someone with an interest in international law. I worked hard at the coursework requirement for the doctorate. I also published another article. While I was in Washington I also had the great good fortune to meet a number of people who were working in the field of international law. They were a wonderfully varied bunch – German graduate students with a whiff of the sixties, a Colombian diplomat who liked to eat her hot chocolate with cheese (a Colombian delicacy), some very affable Canadians at the IMF, convivial French at the World Bank etc. It was a wonderful time.

Ultimately, I left Washington for Geneva at the beginning of 1999 to do an internship with the World Trade Organization (WTO), which was related to my doctoral dissertation. Again, in Geneva I had a terrific opportunity to meet people from around the world. I shared an office with a hilariously subversive colleague from Zimbabwe who is now a famous author, worked with people from Scotland, Belgium, the U.S. and Australia, and on the weekends hung out with a whole posse of crazy Canadians who enjoyed skiing in the mountains above the town - even if I couldn’t afford to join them. It was a fun time. I worked hard – New York hours in Geneva – but the cases I dealt with were fascinating: the United States arguing with Japan over sanitary restrictions on fruit, a Canadian complaint regarding Australian salmon import regulations, the beginnings of the Canada-Brazil aircraft dispute.

On the rare day when things were quiet I’d zip downstairs to watch the diplomats debate each other in the Dispute Settlement Body (DSB), the WTO’s chief dispute settlement organ. I remember the controversy that erupted over the Bananas dispute, the way that the ambassador of the European Communities parried with his American counterpart, the careful words of the Canadian representative, the wisdom of Indians, the way Japan tried to mediate, the inscrutable eyes of Ambassador Morjane, the Chair of the DSB, and the representative from little Dominica, with her pink suit, pounding her fist on the desk and demanding a better deal for the Caribbean countries that were about to lose their banana quota to Europe. Everything – the world I’d only dreamed of a year or two before – was suddenly alive in front me. At the same time, I knew that my ultimate vocation was teaching international law. And I missed Canada. With great good fortune I was able to return home in July 1999 to take up a position here at Western Law.

What I’ve presented so far might sound a little like life on a magic carpet, but that’s hardly accurate. Both before and after I left my job in Toronto I had to be resourceful about finding a position and giving full expression to what I wanted to do. As I look back, I realize that my years of graduate work were rich and stimulating ones, but they were also ones full of uncertainty. Throughout them I didn’t have any scholarship, and while I generally did well in my studies, I wasn’t the best student. It made me wonder if I was cut out for work in international law. There were times – and I think we all have those times – when things were difficult and lonely. Still, I persevered, and I persevered not so much out of any need to hang on, but out of a deep-seated conviction that this is what I was meant to do with my life. I was meant to make a contribution to international law.

I say this because you too may find yourself pursuing your dreams in lonely or difficult circumstances, with little or no money or support, and that can be hard. I say this too because as tough as it was, I have very few regrets. The more I became involved and familiar with international law, the more I realized just how rich and varied the field is and how people who want to get involved don’t allow the usual preconceptions to get in the way. Since I’ve entered the field I’ve witnessed a range of people who work in international law, as diplomats, as lawyers, and as activists in NGOs, all people of incredible dedication. There are people who are working to restore rainforests and extend microcredit. There are people who are working to improve women’s health, in humanitarian assistance, and in peacekeeping operations. There are people serving as our diplomats, who work to secure the safety of Canadians abroad and represent our country’s interests. There are people who teach international law, people who work in law firms helping to resolve boundary disputes and immigration matters, and people in export credit and multilateral lending agencies promoting business in the face of uncertainty. Each of them is pursuing their vision of how international law should contribute to a better world. Each of them has a story. Just ask.

Since becoming a professor in 1999 I have also met some amazing students, and what has been most amazing is their enthusiasm for international law. There have been hundreds of them, many of whom have pursued international law in the face of what you might think are great odds. One student of mine did not do well academically but decided to pursue international law anyway. She took summer courses in the U.S. on the subject, eventually did an LL.M., and eventually went to work for the Ontario government. I met another one from a poor family who was interested in international law and who, after leaving law school saddled with debt, simply picked up and went to Rome, where she managed to get a volunteer position working for the Preparatory Conference of the International Criminal Court. There are other Western Law grads working in the international field, people like Ken Roberts ('92), who now works as a Senior Legal Officer at the International, Impartial and Independent Mechanism (Syria), Stephen deBoer ('91), now Canada’s Ambassador to the WTO, and Darryl Robinson ('96), now a professor of international law at Queen’s University. There is also Anna-Marie Castrodale ('93), who works as a litigator in Toronto but who took a year in 2000 to work for the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda; Reena Bhatt ('94), now working as a tax lawyer and consultant in New York; and Ishani Gunasekera-Perera ('04), who returned to her native Sri Lanka upon graduation to work with an NGO monitoring the use of foreign aid in that country and is now an IP lawyer in Colombo. These are people who have made international law part of their life.

How can you do this? The career path in international law is rarely a straightforward one. I shared with you my own and other people’s experiences to show you that it is often an assembly of small things – an internship, an extracurricular interest, an affiliation – and a willingness to be flexible that gets you started and takes you in the direction you want to go. What the entries in this booklet will help with is in giving you some ideas for your first few steps. The opportunities listed here should help you dream and provide you with some ways of making those dreams come true. The very best of luck, and if there’s any way we can help you, please let us know.
Becoming an International Lawyer

By: Valerie Oosterveld

Many people have asked me over the years to describe my career path in international law. They usually ask because the path to a practice in this area is not clear or straightforward. They know or have heard that there are many Canadian lawyers working in the United Nations, international non-governmental organizations and international judicial institutions such as the International Criminal Court, or in the Canadian government in Global Affairs Canada or the Department of Justice, but they need information on how to access these positions.

When I graduated from law school, there were few opportunities to work in the field of private international law, and fewer still in public international law. However, over the past 25 years, I have seen the opportunities in both areas increase exponentially as the United Nations, the Canadian government and non-governmental organizations expand their focus on responding to armed conflict and massive human rights violations, war-to-peace transitions, emerging rights, trade disputes and terrorism.

The place to begin your international law career is here, at the law school. Take as many international law courses as possible. Doing so will let you know if you really are interested in the subjects international lawyers deal with every day.

The single most important way for law students and new lawyers to break into the field of international law is to undertake an internship. With the exception of those entering international law sections of the Department of Justice or the Foreign Service within Global Affairs Canada, I have rarely met an international lawyer whose career did not start with an internship (or two!). There are some paid internships listed in this booklet. More common in the international field are unpaid internships. If you can secure either type of internship, the experience will be worthwhile and may open the doors to paid positions in the future.

I entered the world of international law through two internships. In 1993, I served as a summer intern in Vienna, Austria at the United Nations (UN) World Conference on Human Rights, working with women’s rights non-governmental organizations in their (successful) quest to have women’s rights explicitly recognized as human rights. This internship taught me how international law is actually made, with every word and phrase carefully negotiated to satisfy competing legal and political visions. It also demonstrated to me the influence nongovernmental organizations can have on the process of making law. My second internship took place in 1994, as part of my articles. I worked at the International Commission of Jurists in Geneva, Switzerland, compiling information on the independence of judges and lawyers in every country in the world. This information was then presented to a sub-committee of the then-UN Human Rights Commission (now the UN Human Rights Council). This internship helped me to understand the intricacies of the UN human rights system. I also met interns from every corner of the globe and learned about the numerous nongovernmental organizations focusing on human rights.

After my internships, I lived the sort of dual life described by Professor Carmody in his essay in this booklet. By day, I practiced labour and employment law at a large firm in Toronto. By night and on weekends and vacations, I lived my international law life: researching and writing articles on international women’s human rights law, chairing an Amnesty International Women’s Action Network group, attending international law conferences (such as the 1995 UN World Conference on Women, in Beijing) and giving talks on international law. The International Criminal Tribunals for the Former Yugoslavia and Rwanda were in their early years of operation and I decided to go to Columbia Law School for an LL.M. and J.S.D. in international criminal law, in order to examine how these tribunals might better incorporate gender-sensitive legal analysis, practices and procedures. This leads me to my next piece of advice: consider doing a graduate legal degree in the area of international law that interests you the most, as many international law positions request or require a higher law degree.

While I was at Columbia Law School, I was hired by a Canadian nongovernmental organization to represent it at the UN negotiations on the draft Statute for a permanent International Criminal Court (ICC). This work resulted in an invitation to join the Canadian delegation at the final round of diplomatic negotiations on the ICC Statute. This was a life-changing experience. Over five weeks in Rome in 1998, I participated in public and closed-door negotiations, representing my country and trying to ensure that the final version of the ICC Statute was gender sensitive. It was exciting, exhausting, energizing and frustrating work. I was hooked, and happily took a position at the (then) Department of Foreign Affairs and International Trade a year later, after serving as Director of the International Human Rights Programme at the University of Toronto, Faculty of Law in the interim. I spent many amazing years at Foreign Affairs, working intensely on the establishment of the ICC and the Special Court for Sierra Leone, as well as on countless other international criminal justice issues.

It is a little-known fact that Global Affairs Canada has a Legal Affairs Bureau, and that you can have a Foreign Service career both as a diplomat and an international lawyer. There are a number of postings, for example at the Canadian Permanent Mission to the United Nations in New York, that require or benefit from a legal background. If a career with Global Affairs Canada interests you, then you will need to apply through the procedure explained on its website. The Department of Justice also employs international lawyers to, for example, prosecute those alleged to have committed genocide, crimes against humanity and war crimes; negotiate new international instruments on human and drug trafficking, bribery and corruption; and to oversee Mutual Legal Assistance Treaties and cooperation with international criminal tribunals.

As Professor Carmody explains in his essay, establishing a career in international law begins with many small steps. You can create your own opportunities from these small steps. I can think of no better place to start creating those opportunities than with the internships listed in this booklet!
Preparing a Resume to Send Abroad

How is a Legal Resume Different?

Since this is probably the first time you’ve had to do a legal resume, it’s worthwhile to briefly outline some of the key differences between legal and non-legal resumes.

<table>

The Short List – Dos and Don’ts

Do:
• Self-evaluate: identify skills relevant to legal work (i.e., research, communication, developing clientele – please see below for an important note on “Transferable Skills”)
• Be concise and consistent!
• Get your information organized and in order
• Take the time to read, re-read, re-read again – and then have someone else do it for you
• Say “Law-Related Experience” not “Legal Experience” – you’re not a lawyer yet
• Put your name and phone number on the second page
• Include CEGEP, if you went to school in Québec

Don’t:
• Use the words “Resume” or “Curriculum Vitae” as a heading, instead, place your name address at the top in the header.
• Use lengthy paragraphs
• Include personal details such as age, marital status, SIN, etc.
• Use any personal pronouns, such as “I”
• Make grammatical or spelling errors
• Go beyond two pages

A Note on Transferable Skills:

At this point in your legal career, you may feel that you don’t have any useful legal skills to include on your resume. Don’t worry! Tons of the experience that you already have is important to legal employers. They’re interested in skills that you can transfer to a legal position. It is all about how you present your past work experience and your ability to make it relevant to an employer by a cleverly drafted resume and cover letter.
Say what you did, then Explain what YOU learned from it!

Think about experiences you’ve had where you’ve developed skills such as:

- Advocating
- Documenting
- Managing
- Planning
- Advising
- Drafting
- Marketing
- Problem-Solving
- Analyzing
- Editing
- Mediating
- Public Speaking
- Assessing
- Evaluating
- Negotiating
- Researching
- Coordinating
- Influencing
- Networking
- Summarizing
- Counselling
- Interviewing
- Observing
- Supervising
- Communicating
- Interpreting
- Organizing
- Translating
- Delegating
- Investigating
- Persuading
- Troubleshooting

* List adapted from the uOttawa 2015 Naked Resumes and Cover Letters Handbook

Putting these verbs into bulleted phrases is an excellent method of integrating them into your resume. In your cover letter you want to use these words when describing previous work experience. Always remember in a cover letter you should not only describe a past experience but also highlight what skills you developed from the experience.

ADELANTE

Location: Spain; Ecuador; Mexico; Uruguay; Chile

Organization Description: Adelante finds an internship for each individual candidate and for this reason our annual numbers are never in the thousands as with some other study and language programs. On average we send anywhere from 1 to 10 candidates to each of our international programs every month. While the majority of participating candidates are aged 21 to 26, we have had a growing number of younger ‘gap year’ candidates, plus a steady number of older candidates who wish to experience a city in a different way than as a typical tourist. The Adelante program illuminates the language and cultural aspects in a way that no other program does, through work assignments and independent living situations, so candidates experience life much like the locals live. The program is much more than the four hours each day of studying or interning, it is also about absorbing, experiencing and learning the life and language of the host city. We provide an ‘open door’ in more ways than one.

Job and Program Description: Adelante offers law internships in multiple locations in Spain, Chile, Mexico, Ecuador and Uruguay. Adelante can provide law internships in either a law firm or within the legal department of a company and also in the Municipal Courts. Law candidates gain experience in a variety of legal fields including but not limited to: Corporate and Business Law, Contract Law, Civil Law, Maritime and Aviation Law, International Business Transactions, General Litigation, Immigration, and others. Labour. Criminal and administrative law sectors can all be found, though law firms do require that candidates have taken their LSATs and/or are enrolled in law school. This program is for independent-minded people looking for a real living abroad experience. Airport pickup, orientation, housing, Spanish classes and internship placement are all included in the program fee. This is an independent program whereby candidates gain real international work experience while immersing themselves in another culture. The program begins with a two-week intensive language course with local teachers.

Duration: 2-6 months

Eligibility/Requirements: Program candidates should be 18 or older and possess a desire to learn about and live in another culture. Candidates should have taken their LSATs and/or be enrolled in law school, particularly if they wish to intern in an actual law firm. Organization Description: The American Bar Association was founded in 1878 and is committed to advancing the rule of law across the United States and beyond by providing practical resources for legal professionals, law school accreditation, model ethics codes and more. For more than 25 years, and through our work in more than 100 countries, the American Bar Association Rule of Law Initiative (ABA ROLI) and our partners have sought to strengthen legal institutions, to support legal professionals, to foster respect for human rights and to advance public understanding of the law and of citizen rights.

Job and Program Description: ABA offers the following internships:

CEELI Research and Assessments Internship – Central European and Eurasian Law Initiative (CEELI) is a public service project of the ABA that advances the rule of law in the world by supporting the legal reform process in Central and Eastern Europe, Eurasia and the Middle East.

The intern will work supporting a variety of short and long term research projects related to rule of law reform in ABA ROLI's Focal Areas, which include: access to justice and human rights, anti-corruption and public integrity, criminal law reform and anti-human trafficking, judicial reform, legal education reform and civic education, legal profession reform, and women's rights.

Rule of Law Internship – American Bar Association Rule of Law Initiative (ABA ROLI) serves as the international development wing of the American Bar Association and seeks to promote justice, economic opportunity, and human dignity through the rule of law. ABA ROLI seeks interns and fellows to assist headquarters staff with a wide variety of the day-to-day support functions that are pertinent to the operations of an international NGO.

Interns for ABA ROLI will work with staff of their assigned division to gain an understanding of international development programs and international rule of law issues. ABA ROLI offers International Development and Legal internships, which differ somewhat in their expected responsibilities and desired applicant profiles. International Development openings will support various aspects of program implementation for DC-based regional and support teams, while Legal openings will be more heavily research-based and tailored toward graduate and law students. These are unpaid internships.

Duration: Dates and daily schedules may be flexible in response to departmental needs, and correspond roughly to academic terms for spring, summer, and fall semesters.

Eligibility/Requirements:
- JD/LL.M students or recent graduates
- Strong commitment to public interest law and/or international development, as evidenced by relevant experience and coursework
- Excellent research, writing, and analytical skills
- Proficiency with MS Office
- International development experience highly desirable but not required; knowledge of foreign languages is a plus

ASIA PACIFIC FORUM ON WOMEN, LAW AND DEVELOPMENT (APWLD)

Location: Chiang Mai, Thailand and Penang, Malaysia (Satellite Office)

Organization Description: APWLD developed from dialogues among Asia Pacific women lawyers, social scientists and activists, which began at the 1985 Third World Forum on Women, held in Nairobi, Kenya. The women participating in the dialogues recognized that while law is used as an instrument of state control over resources, rights and even women's bodies, it can also be used to help effect political and socio-economic changes in our societies. The APWLD endeavours to enable women in the region to use law as an instrument of change for the empowerment of women in their struggle for justice, peace, equality, and development.

Job and Program Description: The Internship Programme is for women activists/students who have background of, and/or interest to work with, and be involved in, women's human rights issues on a regional level. Interns work closely with APWLD secretariat to implement its four programs:
- Women in Power
- Breaking out of Marginalisation
- Grounding the Global
- Feminist Law and Practice

Duration: Minimum 6 months

Eligibility/Requirements:
- Graduate and undergraduate students who intend to work in a field relevant to APWLD activities and program focus.
- Need to be able to work within a team, work well under pressure and be able to handle multiple tasks.
- Desired qualities include written and oral communication skills in English, while knowledge of other language from the Asia Pacific region is an advantage.
- It is preferred that they have excellent knowledge of their field of study or the sector they work with, and a working understanding of the issues APWLD deals with.
- Applications should be endorsed by an educational institution/NGO which the intern is currently involved in.

How to Apply: Complete the application form and send it to apwld@apwld.org with a cover letter that briefly outlines your area of interest, availability and potential references (educational institution or APWLD Member Network), and include a copy of your CV.

BUSINESS EXECUTIVES FOR NATIONAL SECURITY
(BENS)

Location: Washington, DC

Organization Description: Business Executives for National Security (BENS) is a U.S.-based, non-partisan and non-profit organization that supports the US government by applying pro bono, best business practice solutions to its most difficult national security problems. BENS believes that the defining strengths of the American private sector – ingenuity, innovation, and efficiency should be applied to our nation’s security, by working with government partners to develop creative, new approaches to deal with the challenges we face today.

Job and Program Description: BENS offers Research Associate positions throughout the year through The Stanley A. Weiss Research Associate Program. Along with tracking and analyzing policy, there are ample opportunities for attending Congressional hearings and meeting with key governmental figures and business executives. In addition, as a final project, Research Associates may be asked to create and present an original proposal for new BENS action. Many student-RAs have used these papers to fulfill internship credit requirements.

Duration: Spring terms typically run January-May, summer terms June-August, and fall terms September-December. This is a paid position and you must be available to work full-time for four or five days each week.

Eligibility/Requirements:
- BENS accepts Research Associates from all backgrounds and degree programs (e.g., International Affairs, Security Studies, Public Policy, MBAs).
- Strong writing and research skills are a must, as is an interest in national security issues.
- Previous work experience is strongly desired.
- Must be computer-literate and Internet-savvy.

How to Apply: Interested applicants should explore BENS website before applying, demonstrating an interest in and understanding of BENS' mission. Please send a concise cover letter, a one-page resume, and a 2-3 page writing sample to Hannah Beitler, Policy Associate, at HBeitler@bens.org. Applications that do not include all documentation will not be considered.

THE CONSTITUTION PROJECT (TCP) AT THE PROJECT ON GOVERNMENT OVERSIGHT (POGO)

Location: Washington, DC

Organization Description: The Constitution Project on the Government Oversight (POGO) is a program of the Project on Government Oversight, a nonpartisan, not for profit organization in Washington, D.C. The mission of TCP is to safeguard constitutional rights and values threatened by our government’s criminal justice and national security practices, and to strengthen our system of checks and balances. We undertake original research, develop policy positions, publish reports and statements, file amicus briefs, testify before Congress, and hold regular briefings with legislative staff and other policymakers. TCP’s work has been cited by numerous government agencies, as well as leading law and policy organizations.

Job and Program Description:
Legal Internship with the Constitution Project The TCP Team is looking for legal interns interested in learning to bridge the partisan divide on some of the most difficult constitutional questions of the day. Responsibilities will include researching and drafting original legal and policy documents; attending meetings and events on behalf of TCP and helping develop recommendations for reforms and disseminate them to policymakers, media and the public.

Duration: Commitment of 30 hours/week for a minimum of 3 months. Start and end dates are flexible.

Eligibility/Requirements:
- Currently enrolled in law school or recent law school graduate
- Have strong research and writing skills
- Ability to work independently and as part of a team
- An interest in good government and a commitment to non-partisanship

How to Apply: Send the following to Shelby Brown at internships@pogo.org with the subject “[Your Name] TCP Legal Internship Application”
- Cover letter and resume
- Writing sample demonstrating legal analysis (1-3 pages)
- Letter(s) of recommendation (optional, but please limit to two)

EQUALITY NOW

Location: New York, NY; London, UK; Nairobi, Kenya; Beirut, Lebanon

NOTE: Due to the COVID-19 pandemic, Equality Now has temporarily suspended its internship program.

Organization Description: Equality Now works for the protection and promotion of the human rights of women and girls around the world. Working with grassroots women's and human rights organizations and individual activists since 1992, Equality Now documents violence and discrimination against women and mobilizes international action to support efforts to stop these abuses.

Equality Now has summer and semester internships and fellowships for law school students in our Americas, Africa and Europe offices. Students will receive invaluable firsthand knowledge on the human rights issues affecting women and girls around the world, legal advocacy techniques, international human rights mechanisms, and will help us to galvanize public support for gender equality campaigns. All internships/fellowships are unpaid.

Job and Program Description: Equality Now offers specific legal internships/fellowships indicated below. Please check the website for current offerings and locations.

Programs Intern (rolling) will have the opportunity to work across all of Equality Now's program areas. Tasks include: conducting legal and fact-finding research and assisting program officers in running advocacy campaigns by drafting actions and campaign correspondence, attending meetings, and participating in other advocacy efforts.

Legal Fellow can be based in any of the offices. Fellows will be researching and analyzing issues of discrimination and violence against women and girls within our four main program areas using a human rights framework, working with the different program officers and directors on key projects, drafting memos, advocacy papers, briefing papers, fact sheets, correspondence and submissions to human rights bodies and helping with media as needed to make a meaningful impact on women's and girls’ lives.

Duration: Internships typically last 8-10 weeks and hours/week vary by office. Fellowships are all year round and on a full-time basis.

Eligibility/Requirements:
Internships: Must be current law student. Additional requirements are not specified.

Fellowships: Juris Doctor/Law degree, fluency in English and at least one other language preferred (particularly our working languages of Spanish, Arabic or French), demonstrated background and commitment to enhancing the rights of girls and women worldwide, self-motivated, capable of legal analytical work and have an ability to write clearly and effectively

How to Apply: Interested applicants should send an email to the appropriate office email address specifying the internship type and semester or summer in the subject line. Applications must include: a resume/CV, cover letter specifying internship type and timing (Autumn, Spring, Summer or Winter), any foreign language skills, and a short writing sample.

Fellowship applications must also include at least two references and can be emailed to fellowships@equalitynow.org.

Application Deadline: Applications are considered on a rolling basis (except for summer applications).

EUROPEAN CENTRE FOR MINORITY ISSUES (ECMI)

Location: Flensburg, Germany; Tblisi, Georgia; Pristina, Albania

NOTE: Due to the COVID-19 pandemic, most internships are taking place remotely

Organization Description: The European Centre for Minority Issues (ECMI) conducts practice and policy-oriented research, provides information and documentation, and offers advisory services concerning minority-majority relations in Europe. It serves European governments and regional intergovernmental organizations as well as non-dominant groups throughout. The Centre cooperates with the academic community, the media and the general public through the timely provision of information and analysis. The Centre organizes its activities around five thematic clusters – justice and government; politics and civil society; conflict and security; culture and diversity; and citizenship and ethics.

Job and Program Description: The internships are unpaid and ECMI is unable to cover costs related to the internship. They will be based at ECMI headquarters in Flensburg or at the local offices in Tblisi, and Pristina. Interns will participate in research and administration of ongoing ECMI projects, under the direction of the responsible ECMI researcher. Legal Interns will assist the Senior Research Associate in charge of legal projects; contribute to publications projects under the supervision of the Publications Officer and the editor(s) and take part in other activities of the Centre. The possibility of also undertaking independent research leading to a paper of publishable quality may be discussed on an individual basis. There is a possibility to remunerate some interns through the Marie Skodowska-Curie Actions European fellowship which is awarded on a case-by-case basis.

Duration: Maximum 3 months on a full-time basis

Eligibility/Requirements:
- Interested in legal aspects of minority protection, conflict resolution, and human rights.
- Completion of a course of studies in law (minimum: Masters degree or equivalent), and have concentrated in your studies in international law and/or human rights law.
- Excellent grades and sound knowledge of international law are expected; additional academic or professional achievements would be an asset.
- Fluency in English and computer literate.

How to Apply: Email Maj Britt Risbjerg Hansen the following with the subject "Internship Programme Applications":
- A letter of application with the reference "Internship programme" including when you would be available and the area you are interested in; Curriculum vitae and the names and contact details (including e-mail addresses) of two academic/professional references; Unedited writing sample in English (an extract of maximum 5 pages from a research paper not edited by someone else), one page research outline (title, research statement, research questions and short overview).

It is possible to negotiate other time slots upon request, especially to accommodate the different university terms in Europe and overseas. Please specify this in your application.

Location: Phnom Penh, Cambodia

Organization Description: The United Nations Assistance to the Khmer Rouge Trials (UNAKRT) is a United Nations technical assistance project designed to implement the agreement between the United Nations and the Royal Government of Cambodia concerning the prosecution under Cambodian law of crimes committed during the period of Democratic Kampuchea. Pursuant to that agreement, the Extraordinary Chambers in the Courts of Cambodia (ECCC) were created to prosecute the senior leaders of Democratic Kampuchea, and those most responsible for the crimes and serious violations of Cambodian laws related to crimes, international humanitarian law and custom, and international conventions recognized by Cambodia, that were committed between April 17, 1975 and January 6, 1979.

Job and Program Description: The UNAKRT Internship Programme offers recent university graduates and postgraduate students an opportunity to work in the unique environment of this hybrid tribunal in Cambodia. Interns will have the opportunity to enhance their practical experience and their theoretical knowledge in many of the offices of the UNAKRT. The programme is open to candidates with an educational background in a field related to the work of the ECCC Offices. The interns will have the opportunity to participate in the daily activities of the ECCC Offices, to assist the officers in their legal or supportive responsibilities and to participate in the activities that have particular relevance to the work of the ECCC.

Duration: 2-6 months on a full-time basis

Eligibility/Requirements:
- Be under 35 years of age
- Have no more than 5 years of work experience
- Be highly motivated with outstanding academic qualifications in a field of study pertinent to UNAKRT
- Have obtained a degree from a recognized university or be enrolled in a degree programme in a graduate school (second university degree or higher) at the time of application or during the internship
- Working proficiency in English and/or French

Preferable experience:
- Study of international criminal law or Human Rights law;
- Excellent legal research skills;
- Experience working in a law office;
- Relevant course work in relation to the work of the section/office;
- Excellent written and oral communication skills;
- Proven ability to undertake tasks with minimal supervision;
- Ability to work in a high pressure environment.

HUMAN RIGHTS WATCH (HRW)

Organization Description: Human Rights Watch (HRW) is a non-profit, non-governmental organization that promotes and defends human rights throughout the world according to accepted norms of international law. HRW monitors governmental compliance with civil, political, economic, social and cultural rights, the responsibility of private actors including corporations for human rights violations, and the conduct of war by state and non-state combatants in more than seventy nations worldwide.

Job and Program Description: There are various internship and fellowship opportunities available that can be read in full detail on the website.

Duration: Internships are during the summer or academic semesters. Fellowships are one year.

Requirements/Eligibility: Internships: Applicants should be well-organized, self-motivated and reliable, with a strong interest in international human rights. Relevant coursework is highly desirable, and knowledge of foreign languages is a plus. Computer skills (i.e., Microsoft Office, Internet applications) are required.

Fellowships: Applicants must demonstrate a strong background in international human rights and be committed to building a career in human rights. Must have exceptional analytic skills, an ability to write and speak clearly, and a commitment to work in the human rights field in the future. Proficiency in one language in addition to English is strongly desired. Familiarity with countries or regions where serious human rights violations occur is also valued. Depending on the fellowship for which they wish to apply, prospective fellows must be recent graduates of law or must provide evidence of significant, comparable, relevant work experience.

How to Apply: Internships: Please apply directly online for each internship opportunity. You will be required to create an online profile to begin the application.

Fellowships: Applications should be sent by email, under single cover and as PDF files, to fellowship@hrw.org with the name of the fellowship in the subject line. Applicants are responsible for compiling complete application packets which must include the following:

- Cover letter, resume, two letters of recommendation, at least one unedited, unpublished writing sample (no legal briefs), an official law or graduate school transcript (applicants in one-year graduate programs should supply an undergraduate transcript with a list of their graduate school courses)

Application Deadlines: Varies with specific internship/fellowship however, it is advised that applications be submitted as soon as possible.

INSTITUTE FOR HUMAN RIGHTS AND DEVELOPMENT
IN AFRICA (IHRDA)

Location: Banjul, The Gambia

Organization Description: IHRDA’s mandate is to increase the effectiveness and accessibility of the human rights protection mechanisms of the African Union, since the most critical challenge to the effectiveness of the African human rights system is a lack of awareness concerning its procedures. IHRDA has undertaken to promote respect for human rights on the continent by strengthening the human rights institutions in Africa, ensuring compliance with the existing norms and making the system widely accessible to victims of human rights violations and other actors of civil society.

Job and Program Description: The aim of the internship programme is to contribute to the training of young professional human rights workers, in particular those from Africa. Interns are usually students in law, political science or social science seeking to expand their experience in the field of human rights. Prior to the commencement of an internship, a successful internship applicant or their sponsoring organization will discuss with us the work the intern will do and targets to be achieved. Interns work under the supervision of the officer responsible for the chosen project/area of interest. This internship is unpaid.

Duration: 3 – 12 months

Eligibility/Requirements: Interns must be computer literate and fluent in either English or French; working knowledge of the other language would be an advantage. Arabic or Portuguese language skills are an added advantage. Interns may be of any academic or national background. Applications from people with legal training, training in, fund-raising, graphic design, computers and web page maintenance, library and cataloguing skills, public relations and social sciences are all welcome.

How to Apply: Applicants must complete the online Internship Application Form six months in advance of the proposed dates of internship. Internships are reviewed on a quarterly basis – March, June, September and December. Successful Applicants will be notified as soon as possible after the review.

Application Deadline: At least 6 months in advance of proposed start date

INSTITUTE FOR JUSTICE (IJ)

Location: Headquarters in Arlington, Virginia; various regional offices

Organization Description: Founded in 1991, the Institute for Justice is what a civil liberties law firm should be. As our nation’s only libertarian public interest law firm, we engage in cutting-edge litigation and advocacy both in the courts of law and in the court of public opinion on behalf of individuals whose most basic rights are denied by the government – like the right to earn an honest living, private property rights, and the right to free speech, especially in the areas of commerce or politics. As Wired magazine said, the Institute for Justice “helps individuals subject to wacky government regulations.”

Job and Program Description: The Institute for Justice recruits only the most talented law students from across the country for its Dave Kennedy Fellowship program in the summer. These are available at any of their offices. The program offers an unparalleled professional opportunity to substantively contribute to active and future strategic litigation in both state and federal courts. During their summers, law students work closely with IJ attorneys to develop litigation strategies and assist in the nuts and bolts of cutting-edge civil rights litigation, including propounding and responding to discovery requests, drafting motions and briefs, and preparing for hearings. Dave Kennedy Fellows are paid $7000 for the 10-week program. Semester clerkships are also available.

Duration: Fellowships are for 10 weeks; semester clerkships are in accordance with academic calendar

Eligibility/Requirements: None specified, other than that applicants for fellowships and clerkships must be law students.

How to Apply: Applications are accepted online through the website, they must include a cover letter, resume, and writing sample.

Application Deadline: March 1 for fellowships; clerkships are accepted on a rolling basis for fall and spring semesters

INTERNATIONAL COMMISSION OF JURISTS (ICJ)

Location: Geneva, Switzerland

Organization Description: The International Commission of Jurists (ICJ) is dedicated to the primacy, coherence and implementation of international law and principles that advance human rights. What distinguishes the ICJ is its impartial, objective and authoritative legal approach to the protection and promotion of human rights through the rule of law. The ICJ provides legal expertise at both the international and national levels to ensure that developments in international law adhere to human rights principles and those international standards are implemented at the national level.

Job and Program Description: ICJ internship programme offers interns the opportunity to gain practical experience of human rights legal and advocacy work at the international level, to gain a better understanding of the ICJ’s goals and objectives and of how a Human Rights NGO is organised, to gain exposure to the practical functioning of the United Nations human rights bodies and mechanisms based in Geneva, to gain valuable experience of working in a professional office environment, to build professional and personal relations with colleagues and counter-parts who will be able to provide long-term professional advice, encouragement and support, and to help interns in career development. For many the experience of an internship with the ICJ has established a lifelong commitment and career in the international human rights field.

The intern’s responsibilities will be based on the needs of the ICJ, on the candidate’s interests as well as on the requirements included in grant/fellowship applications, when applicable. ICJ interns are integrated into the ICJ’s staff and become part of a team of junior support staff who participate and contribute to staff meetings, discussions and briefing sessions, research human rights issues, draft papers and reports, maintain information databases, and provide support to other ICJ activities. The interns will also have the opportunity to attend lectures, and other events related to human rights held in Geneva. This is an unpaid internship.

Duration: Full time and part time internships are available, for a maximum of 6 months.

Eligibility/Requirements: Applicants are expected to:

- Be a postgraduate student or currently completing a postgraduate degree in law, political science, international relations or a related field. Priority will be given to graduates who have or are studying law, especially human rights or international law.
- Be highly dedicated to the legal protection and promotion of human rights; Be well-organised, have strong research, analytical and drafting skills and able to work independently;
- Be computer literate as well as familiar with Internet research; Be highly motivated, able to work as part of a multicultural team and willing to apply themselves in a frequently pressurised environment; and
- Have spoken and written fluency in English and desirably French and/or another foreign language.

How to Apply: Email a resume, cover letter and the names and contact details of at least two references.

ORGANIZATION DESCRIPTION: The International Committee of the Red Cross (ICRC) is an impartial, neutral and independent organization whose exclusively humanitarian mission is to protect the lives and dignity of victims of armed conflict and other situations of violence and to provide them with assistance. The ICRC also endeavors to prevent suffering by promoting and strengthening humanitarian law and universal humanitarian principles. Established in 1863, the ICRC is at the origin of the Geneva Conventions and the International Red Cross and Red Crescent Movement. It directs and coordinates the international activities conducted by the Movement in armed conflicts and other situations of violence.

JOB AND PROGRAM DESCRIPTION: The ICRC has been offering traineeships in more than 40 different sectors for many years (around 80 each year at the moment), all based at our headquarters in Geneva. We would like to give a first professional opportunity to graduates to develop their expertise and benefit from an enriching professional experience in the world's leading humanitarian organization. We offer a pleasant and professional work environment in an international atmosphere. You will have the opportunity to work in diverse areas with experts in their field. Traineeship opportunities are paid and are posted regularly on the website.

DURATION: Varies with each traineeship but is typically on a full-time basis for 1 year.

ELIGIBILITY/REQUIREMENTS:
- Must be a current university student or recent graduate
- Other requirements will be specific to each traineeship

INTERNATIONAL COURT OF JUSTICE (ICJ)

Location: The Hague, The Netherlands

Organization Description: The International Court of Justice (ICJ) is the principal judicial organ of the United Nations. It was established in June 1945 by the Charter of the United Nations and began work in April 1946. The ICJ has two purposes: to settle in accordance with international law the legal disputes submitted to it by States, and to give advisory opinions on legal questions referred to it by duly authorized international organs and agencies.

Job and Program Description: The ICJ offers internships to students and young professionals who are in the early stages of their careers. The internship is an opportunity for them to put their knowledge and experience into practice, while performing certain tasks for the Court under the supervision of Registry officials. Given the size of the organization, only a limited number of internships can be offered throughout the year. Placements are, however, possible in all departments and divisions of the Registry.

Duration: 1-3 months

Eligibility/Requirements: The working languages of the Court are English and French. Applicants will be required to sign a written undertaking binding them to keep strictly confidential any information obtained during the course of their internship.

How to Apply: Fill out the online application for the specific internship you are applying to. Be prepared to submit an electronic copy of your passport and all diplomas listed on your profile.

- Curriculum vitae along with a covering letter
- Copy of their official academic record
- Letters of reference
- Writing sample

INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL COURT

Location: The Hague, The Netherlands

Organization Description: The International Criminal Court (ICC) investigates and, where warranted, tries individuals charged with the gravest crimes of concern to the international community: genocide, war crimes, crimes against humanity and the crime of aggression. The Court is participating in a global fight to end impunity, and through international criminal justice, the Court aims to hold those responsible accountable for their crimes and to help prevent these crimes from happening again.

Job and Program Description: The Court offers various internships to highly motivated young professionals with good academic qualifications who are in the early stages of their careers. The internship is a practical educational experience whereby Interns principally assist the staff of the Court in discharging their duties. Under supervision, Interns are assigned projects and tasks that are relevant to their educational background and interests and provide them with the opportunity to put into practice and further develop their theoretical knowledge. The work will generally be comparable to the work of the upper general service category or junior professional level. Specific responsibilities will vary with each internship you apply to.

Duration: 3-6 months on a full-time basis

Eligibility/Requirements:
- All candidates must have a university law degree in law. Candidate must have sound knowledge of public international law, international criminal law, contract law, or (international) administrative law, as relevant to the work of the RLO; an advanced university degree is a strong asset. Candidates are expected to have a very good record of academic performance.
- Practical experience that is relevant to the work of the RLO may be considered an asset.
- Demonstrate excellent analytical and drafting skills
- Be able to adapt to multicultural and multilingual working environments
- Possess strong teamwork skills (listen, consult and communicate proactively)
- Have acquired a good standard of computer skills (including Microsoft Office applications)
- Proficiency in French or English is required. Working knowledge of the other is desirable. Knowledge of another official language of the Court (Arabic, Chinese, Russian and Spanish) is an asset.

How to Apply: Applications must be sent through the eRecruitment system and include the following:
- A completed “Duties and Responsibilities Form” (refer to step 1 on your eRecruitment Profile page)
- Motivation letter (maximum of 400 words)
- Two reference letters (one academic)
- Scanned copies of university degrees and/or diplomas
- Scanned copies of official academic transcripts that state your courses, results and completion date
- One short essay on a subject relevant to the work of the Trust Fund (maximum of 750 words, single spaced, type written)

INTERNATIONAL CRISIS GROUP

Location: Various locations

Organization Description: The International Crisis Group is an independent organization working to prevent wars and shape policies that will build a more peaceful world. Our expert analysts engage directly with all parties to a conflict as they conduct research on the ground, share multiple perspectives and propose practical policy solutions. We publish comprehensive reports and timely commentaries to inform decision making and shape the public debate on how to limit threats to peace and security. We work with heads of government, policymakers, media, civil society, and conflict actors themselves to sound the alarm of impending conflict and to open paths to peace.

Job and Program Description: Crisis Group offers exceptional opportunities for recent undergraduate and graduate students. As an intern you will be able to take what you've learned in university and use it to make a practical contribution towards the prevention and resolution of deadly conflict. Opportunities range from working on research projects with field analysts in Dakar, Bishkek and Bogota to working with our EU/UN/US advocacy teams in Brussels/New York/Washington to organizing major events as part of our development team or supporting our communications team in the Brussels headquarters. Internships are unpaid, however, do contribute towards lunch and daily transportation. Internships are posted regularly on the website when they become available.

Duration: 3-6 months

Eligibility/Requirements: Varies with each specific internship but applicants generally require:
- Undergraduate degree in international relations, political science, conflict studies, public policy, or Asia studies (or a related subject), with a preference for those with a postgraduate degree
- Excellent verbal and written command of English; applicants who possess foreign language proficiency and previous international residency are highly desirable
- Proven research skills in political analysis or international relations
- Highly organized and able to pay close attention to detail
- Ability to work in a fast-paced and often demanding environment; computer skills in Microsoft Office, email and internet applications
- Self-motivated, flexible and reliable with a demonstrated passion for foreign affairs are required
- Eligibility to work in the internship country

INTERNATIONAL FUND FOR AGRICULTURAL DEVELOPMENT (IFAD)

Location: Rome, Italy

Organization Description: At the International Fund for Agricultural Development (IFAD) we invest in rural people, empowering them to increase their food security, improve the nutrition of their families and increase their incomes. We help them build resilience, expand their businesses and take charge of their own development. IFAD is an international financial institution and specialized United Nations agency based in Rome, the UN’s food and agriculture hub. Since 1978, we have provided US$23.2 billion in grants and low-interest loans to projects that have reached about 518 million people. IFAD is dedicated to eradicating rural poverty in developing countries.

Job and Program Description: The Internship Programme aims at promoting a better understanding of the United Nations and IFAD. IFAD offers “real work” environment to undergraduates and graduate students. Interns are fully involved in the work programme of the Division that has selected them to carry out assignments relevant to their studies under the supervision of a responsible staff member.

During this period, the intern may have a chance to visit IFAD-funded projects. Interns will be paid the equivalent of an all-inclusive lump sum amount of USD 600 per month, less any payment received from a sponsor. The payment will be pro-rated for periods of less than one month on the basis of 30 days per month. IFAD will be responsible for obtaining the necessary visas and arranging travel to Rome. In addition to a monthly allowance, EIP interns receive a housing and travel allowance. IFAD will not provide medical insurance and Interns should carry their own medical insurance.

Duration: 6 months

Eligibility/Requirements:
- Be enrolled in a university or graduate school, have attended courses in the last 12 months, and have completed at least two years of undergraduate studies when joining IFAD through the programme, or have recently completed university studies at the undergraduate or postgraduate level
- Be fluent in English; fluency in other IFAD official languages is an asset. In the case of interns recruited in IFAD country office locations, fluency in the main country language may be required
- Be 30 years of age or younger

How to Apply: Register and apply through IFAD’s career portal. Applicants registering for the Internship Programme may also indicate their ongoing studies and indicate “not applicable” in the employment section if they do not have any work experience.

Application Deadline: Applicants can submit their application at any time of the year. Interns will be selected for positions as and when needed by hiring managers at IFAD.

INTERNATIONAL JUSTICE MISSION (IJM)

Location: Headquarters in Washington DC; various offices in Asia, Africa, Latin America

Organization Description: International Justice Mission (IJM) is a human rights agency that brings rescue to victims of slavery, sexual exploitation and other forms of violent oppression. It is the largest anti-slavery organization in the world. IJM lawyers, investigators and aftercare professionals work with local officials to secure immediate victim rescue and aftercare, to prosecute perpetrators and to ensure that public justice systems - police, courts and laws - effectively protect the poor. IJM's justice professionals work in their communities in 17 field offices in Asia, Africa and Latin America to secure tangible and sustainable protection of national laws through local court systems.

Job and Program Description: IJM Summer Legal Internships are designed to give law students an opportunity to serve in one of our field offices. Summer Legal Interns gain skills and knowledge regarding international laws and policies which protect the rights of those subject to violent forms of human rights abuses. The IJM summer legal internship program provides exposure to legal work and helps participants develop skills in legal research, writing briefs and preparing case documentation.

IJM interns have the unique opportunity to join teams of Christian attorneys in Africa, South Asia, Southeast Asia and Latin America to help protect clients from sex trafficking, slavery, unprosecuted rape, illegal detention, police brutality and illegal land seizure. Each field office is directed by an IJM Field Office Director who is experienced in human rights law, Christian leadership and office management. The field offices range in size from 10 to 60 people, allowing for ample opportunity to gain exposure to the frontlines of international human rights work. This is an unpaid internship.

There are also 12-month legal internships available. Positions are posted periodically on their career portal.

Duration: 3 months on a full-time basis

Eligibility/Requirements:
- Candidates must have completed at least one year of law school
- All fellows and interns must possess a mature orthodox Christian faith as defined by the Apostles' Creed
- Fluent in English; for Latin America offices fluency in Spanish is required
- Must provide background check prior to deployment if selected

How to Apply: Applications are accepted through the online career portal. Applicants will be required to submit the following in one pdf: cover letter describing your interest in an IJM Internship or Fellowship, resume, and Statement of Faith. Undergraduate and law school transcripts are requested for 2nd and 3rd year law students upon application. First year law students only need submit undergraduate transcripts upon application. IJM may request the first semester law school transcript during the selection process.

INTERNATIONAL LABOUR ORGANIZATION (ILO)

Location: Headquarters in Geneva, Switzerland with field offices abroad

Organization description: The ILO is the international organization responsible for drawing up and overseeing international labour standards. It is the only ‘tripartite’ United Nations agency that brings together representatives of governments, employers and workers to jointly shape policies and programmes promoting Decent Work for all. This unique arrangement gives the ILO an edge in incorporating ‘real world’ knowledge about employment and work. The ILO is devoted to promoting social justice and internationally recognized human and labour rights, pursuing its founding mission that social justice is essential to universal and lasting peace.

Job and Program Description: The ILO offers internships in two streams: professional and secretarial. The Professional stream is for students undertaking advanced studies in a technical field of interest to the ILO, including social security, labour economics, labour statistics, labour law, condition of work, women and gender issues, etc. Interns are provided with an opportunity to: increase their understanding of relevant issues at the international level by involving them directly in the work of the Office and the application of ILO principles, programmes and strategies and gain practical work experience related to their academic background or future work in the field related to ILO’s mission.

Where an intern is not supported by an institution (university, government or otherwise), a stipend to cover basic subsistence costs will be paid. In Geneva, this will be at the level of SFr. 1,500 per month. In ILO field locations, the amount of the stipend to be paid to interns will be established in line with other similar organisations engaging interns at local level and taking account of local circumstances.

Duration: 3-6 months. Internships start on the 1st or 15th of each month.

Eligibility/Requirements:
- Applicants should be graduate and/or postgraduate students or recently graduated
- Applicants should hold degrees in disciplines considered relevant to the ILO's work, e.g. international law, economics, industrial relations, political science, and the social sciences.
- Applicants can be of any nationality
- Applicants should have a working (both oral and written) knowledge of at least one of the ILO's official languages (English, French or Spanish).
- Applicants should be able to adapt to an international, multicultural, multilingual environment
- Good communication skills
- Ability to work fairly independently or as part of a team
- Initiative and flexibility
- Any past work experience and knowledge of IT-related work would be an advantage
- Close relatives of a serving ILO official are not eligible to apply.

How to Apply: Applications are accepted via the online job portal. All applications require a cover letter in the last section of the application. All applications without a cover letter will not be considered and cannot be attached after the deadline.

Application Deadline: Internship vacancies are posted every 6 months in January and June each year. Check the website for updates.

PROJECTS ABROAD

Location: Africa; South America; Caribbean; Asia

Organization Description: Until 1997, Projects Abroad was a small organization with just a few part-time staff sending university students to teach English in Eastern Europe. But with more and more people taking time out on academic and work-related breaks, and with many developing countries in need of self-funded volunteers, our organized volunteer programs started to mushroom around the world. We now have two North American offices located in New York City and Toronto. With more than 600 trained staff in our destinations, and offering over 100 generic projects, we are one of the leading international volunteer organizations.

Job and Program Description: International Law & Human Rights internships with Projects Abroad give you the opportunity to work on legislation and make a difference in other people’s lives. You can become part of a vital resource by providing legal services to businesses, community organizations, or individuals. We offer a wide variety of internships abroad suitable for law graduates, law professionals wishing to take a career break, law students (during their vacation period) and people who have completed a law conversion course. These international law internships with Projects Abroad enable you to gain a unique insight into day-to-day legal practice and the rules of law while working in well-respected legal organizations in Africa, South America, Caribbean, or Asia.

Duration: Varies with specific internship

Eligibility/Requirements: Varies with specific internship however, generally at least one year of undergraduate law school is beneficial

How to Apply: Complete the application form on the organization’s website. A deposit of $295 Canadian is required to process the application. When you apply we ask you for the name and address of a reference. This will be someone who knows you well - such as a teacher or an employer. We then get in touch with them and ask for a reference. This is usually enough to assure us that you are suitable for a placement. We occasionally invite prospective volunteers for an informal interview to iron out any concerns.

Application Deadline: Internships take place year round so there is no set deadline. It is advisable to apply at least 3 months prior to the intended start date. Applicants looking to set up a last-minute arrangement should call 1-877-921-9666 to see if a placement can be arranged.

REFUGEE LAW PROJECT

Location: Uganda

Organization Description: The Refugee Law Project (RLP) was established in 1999 to provide legal aid to asylum seekers and refugees in Uganda. RLP seeks to ensure fundamental human rights for all asylum seekers, refugees, and internally displaced persons within Uganda. We envision a country that treats all people within its borders with the same standards of respect and social opportunities. We work to see that all people living in Uganda, as specified under national and international law, are treated with the fairness and consideration due fellow human beings.

Job and Program Description: The Refugee Law Project offers internships to Ugandans and East Africans working in forced mitigation-related fields, and also accepts international internships, depending on need and available openings. Internships are unpaid and interns are expected to be fully self-funded.

Duration: May – August

Eligibility/Requirements: Applicants should have a background in conflict, law, human rights, social sciences, forced migration, and/or related fields, and have excellent written and spoken English skills. It is advantageous to have done some post-graduate work in a field relating to the mandate of the RLP and/or be conversant in French, Kiswahili, or other Ugandan languages (e.g., Luo, Madi, Iteso, etc.). Applicants interested in placement with the Research & Advocacy Department should have experience in field research and qualitative methodologies. Due to lack of equipment, they must be willing to bring their own laptop with them.

How to Apply: Applicants are requested to send curriculum vitae, academic or professional references, and covering letter to interns@refugeelawproject.org. The covering letter should include:
- Preferred area of work (programme or unit)
- Motivation and expectations from the internship
- What ways the applicant can support RLP’s daily activities
- Duration of stay (any plans for leave or travelling on holiday should be excluded from the timeframe committed).

SUPREME COURT OF ISRAEL

Location: Jerusalem, Israel

Organization Description: The Supreme Court, which stands at the head of the judicial pyramid, is the authorized interpreter of laws enacted by the Israeli parliament – the Knesset. It is the body that applies the binding norms in Israel and develops the law in a proper and lawful manner, one building block on top of the next. In developing the law, the Supreme Court gives expression to the values of the State of Israel as a Jewish and democratic state, and strives to achieve a just judicial result. Even prior to the enactment of the Basic Laws, the Supreme Court developed a philosophy of human rights, and its decisions provided a response for the rights and interests of the individual, and of the general public in Israel, in times of crisis and in times in which the security of the State was under threat.

Job and Program Description: The Supreme Court runs a successful and very competitive program for Foreign Law Clerks. Over the years, the Court has enjoyed hosting clerks from all over the globe. Foreign clerks at the Supreme Court are assigned to a specific Justice and typically research comparative legal issues and draft memoranda regarding legal questions which arise in pending cases. Foreign clerks will likely find themselves engaging in several different areas of law such as public international law, criminal law, civil law and constitutional law. Internships are unpaid.

Duration: Minimum 3 months

Eligibility/Requirements:

- Excellent student; preferably at least in 2nd year of law school
- Fluency in English; Hebrew or another language considered an asset

How to Apply: Email the following material and include in the subject line "Foreign Law Clerk Application - [Full name of the applicant]:"

- Cover letter indicating the period during which you would like to work at the Court, up-to-date CV, law school transcript, writing sample, and two letters of recommendation, preferably at least one from a law school professor.

Application Deadline: It is recommended that applications are sent at least 5 months prior to the period(s) you wish to clerk at the Court. Applications are accepted during these periods:

- 15 February – 15 March
- 15 May – 15 June
- 15 August – 15 September
- 15 November – 15 December

UNITED NATIONS ASSOCIATION IN CANADA (UNA-CANADA)

Location: Varies locations around the world

NOTE: Due to the COVID-19 pandemic, UNA-CA has temporarily suspended its internship program.

Organization Description: UNA-Canada is an historic national civil society organization and registered charity with the mandate to educate and engage citizens on the work of the United Nations and global issues that affect us all. In summary, we grow Global Citizens. As the leading policy voice on multilateralism in Canada, our work is framed by the 17 Sustainable Development Goals established by the UN to guide the international community until 2030. UNA-Canada engages citizens and decision makers at every level of Canadian society. We invest across generations, bringing empathy-based educational resources on health, citizen education, diversity, peace and the environment to both the best and the brightest and to most marginalized youth within Canada and in the world’s poorest countries.

Job and Program Description: UNA-Canada’s International Development & Diplomacy Internship Programme (IDDIP) is an avenue for qualified and motivated Canadian graduates and professionals to gain work experience in the United Nations system. IDDIP offers successful applicants an international internship with a UN Agency as a Junior Professional Consultant (JPC). UNA-Canada negotiates meaningful, SDG-focused positions with United Nations Agencies, providing applicants with valuable, demanding, and meaningful work experience in a field relevant to their studies and/or career aspirations. JPCs are recruited, trained, and supported through their internships.

The programme, funded by the Government of Canada’s Youth Employment Strategy under the International Youth Internship Program, offers modest living stipends to interns overseas that cover accommodation, food and ground transportation. The programme also contributes to vaccines, insurance and visa costs and covers the full price of airfare. Interns are responsible for researching, preparing, and budgeting for their accommodation in their placement locations.

Duration: 6 months

Eligibility/Requirements:
- Canadian citizens or permanent residents
- Graduates of a post-secondary institution

UNITED NATIONS HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR REFUGEES (UNHCR)

Location: Geneva, Switzerland; various field offices

Organization Description: UNHCR, the UN Refugee Agency, is a global organization dedicated to saving lives, protecting rights and building a better future for refugees, forcibly displaced communities and stateless people. We work to ensure that everybody has the right to seek asylum and find safe refuge, having fled violence, persecution, war or disaster at home. Since 1950, we have faced multiple crises on multiple continents, and provided vital assistance to refugees, asylum-seekers, internally displaced and stateless people, many of whom have nobody left to turn to. We help to save lives and build better futures for millions forced from home.

Job and Program Description: UNHCR’s Internship Programme offers eligible students and recent graduates the opportunity to gain experience in the humanitarian sector in an international environment, in line with their academic programme or future work in a field related to UNHCR’s mission. Internships are offered at various locations depending on the needs and capacity of offices to receive and supervise interns and provide them with meaningful assignments. Internships are unpaid and posted regularly on the website.

Duration: 2-6 months on a full-time basis

Eligibility/Requirements:
- Recent graduate or current student in a graduate/undergraduate school programme from a university or higher education facility accredited by UNESCO; and
- Have completed at least two years of undergraduate studies in a field relevant to, or of interest to, the work of the organization.

How to Apply: Applications are only accepted online through the specific internship posting. There is also an option to apply to an Internship Pool.

UNITED NATIONS INTERNATIONAL RESIDUAL MECHANISM FOR INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL TRIBUNALS

Location: Arusha, United Republic of Tanzania and The Hague, The Netherlands

Organization Description: The International Residual Mechanism for Criminal Tribunals ("Mechanism") is mandated to perform a number of essential functions previously carried out by the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda ("ICTR") and the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia ("ICTY"). In carrying out these essential functions the Mechanism maintains the legacies of these two pioneering ad hoc international criminal courts and strives to reflect best practices in the field of international criminal justice.

Job and Program Description: The Internship Programme offers professionals, graduate students, and undergraduate students who are in their final stages of education the possibility to enhance their professional training in the unique environment of one of the two branches of the Mechanism. Legal Internships provide a unique and exciting opportunity to gain insight into the day-to-day work of a prominent international judicial institution.

Duration: 3-6 months on a full-time basis

Eligibility/Requirements:
- Must have a university degree or be in the final stage of their undergraduate studies. If the applicant has already completed a four-year undergraduate university degree before commencing graduate legal studies, he or she must have completed at least one year of graduate legal studies by the time the internship commences.
- Preference is given to law graduates who are acquainted with one or more of the following disciplines: international criminal law, public international law, international humanitarian law, human rights law, criminal law, and criminology.
- Applicants must be proficient in English and/or French, both written and oral. Knowledge of other languages – particularly Kinyarwanda or Swahili (if applying to the Arusha branch) or Bosnian/Croatian/Serbian (if applying to the Hague branch) – is an asset.
- There is no age restriction for applicants.

How to Apply: Applications are processed through Inspira, the United Nations’ career management portal. Be sure to follow the instructions in each vacancy notice very carefully. Applicants must submit the following documents in one email or envelope to their Branch of choice. If applying to all Branches, a separate application must be submitted to each.
- Completed application form (Part I)
- Cover letter/letter of intent stating the reasons for applying
- Two letters of reference/recommendation (instructions in Part II)
- Copies of university/law studies transcripts (including courses taken and grades received)
- Writing sample, maximum 10 pages (preferably in a field relevant to the work of the Mechanism)

Application Deadline: Approximately 6 months before the official starting date of the internship.

UNITED NATIONS OFFICE OF THE HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR HUMAN RIGHTS (OHCHR)

Location: Geneva, Switzerland

Organization Description: The Office of the High Commissioner for Human Rights (UN Human Rights) is the leading UN entity on human rights. The General Assembly entrusted both the High Commissioner and her Office with a unique mandate to promote and protect all human rights for all people. The United Nations human rights programme aims to ensure that the protection and enjoyment of human rights is a reality in the lives of all people. UN Human Rights also plays a crucial role in safeguarding the integrity of the three interconnected pillars of the United Nations – peace and security, human rights and development.

Job and Program Description: Internships at OHCHR are intended to: increase the intern's understanding of current human rights issues at the international level and give them an insight into the work of the United Nations and OHCHR in particular; and provide OHCHR and the United Nations Human Rights mechanisms with the assistance and contribution of outstanding young students or graduates.

Interns are assigned to an organizational unit of OHCHR according to the needs of the Office and their own areas of interest. They are involved, inter alia, in: researching human rights issues, drafting analytical papers and reports, providing substantive and technical servicing of meetings, backstopping fact-finding and technical cooperation activities as well as field operations and supporting other OHCHR activities, depending on the exigencies of the Office.

As part of the internship programme, OHCHR endeavours to brief interns through a series of information sessions on human rights issues conducted by staff of the Office.

Duration: 2-6 months

Eligibility/Requirements:
- Be enrolled in a graduate school programme (second university degree or equivalent, or higher); or be enrolled in the final academic year of a first university degree programme (minimum Bachelor's level or equivalent); or have graduated with a university degree and, if selected, must commence the internship within a one-year period of graduation.
- Be able to cover the costs of travel, accommodation, as well as living expenses of the internship

WESTERN LAW INTERNSHIP PROGRAM (WLIP)

Location: Various locations around the world

Organization Description: Through our thriving Western Law Internship Program (WLIP), students have the opportunity to intern with government departments, international organizations, corporations and firms. The WLIP provides students with the opportunity to expand their knowledge of international, domestic and comparative law issues while applying their legal skills in a professional environment.

Job and Program Description: In many of the internships, interns are asked to research and analyze international, comparative and domestic law issues for their organizations. In addition, interns may be asked to assist in United Nations sessions or international, governmental, nongovernmental or client meetings. Some internships are geared towards providing students with experience in global business, banking or sport law, while others are focused on public law. Students selected for the internship program are provided with a significant stipend meant to assist with basic expenses, such as airfare, accommodation and living expenses, during the internship.

In recent years, Western Law students participated in these Western Law Internship Program opportunities:
- Canadian Environmental Law Association
- Canadian Red Cross in Ottawa
- CIBC World Markets Inc. in Toronto through McCarthy Tétrault LLP Business Law Internship
- Debewin Summer Law Internship in various Ontario locations
- Newmont in Vancouver, B.C. through the Cassels Brock & Blackwell International Student Internship in Mining Finance
- Ontario Bar Association
- United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees Canada (UNHCR)

Duration: Internships typically last for 10 - 12 weeks, usually from early or mid-May until late July. Most internships can be arranged with dates in mind such as August Toronto articling recruitment interviews.

Eligibility/Requirements: The WLIP internships are open to current first and second year Western Law students. Students are eligible to participate in only one WLIP internship during their JD studies.

The criteria for the selection of successful recipients include the following:
- Demonstrated academic and research abilities (including writing skills);
- Demonstrated interest in the area of law covered by the internship (e.g. courses, volunteer/professional work);
- Demonstrated initiative, commitment and ability to handle multiple tasks in a professional manner;
- Depending on the internship, ability to speak other languages may be an asset.

How to Apply: The announcements about the call for WLIP applications will be posted in the SLS Daily. Plan to attend the WLIP information sessions held during the Fall Term, which will provide an opportunity to hear from past summer’s participants. The details of each call for applications can be found in ATLAS on all Western Law internship pages. Applications will be accepted through the ATLAS database. The following will be required to submit an application:
- Cover Letter
- Law school marks ("web academic report")
- Resume
- Names of two references (no letters)

Interns are paid a monthly stipend of 900 CHF. Internships are posted to the careers page regularly.

Duration: Minimum of 4-6 months

Eligibility/Requirements: Eligible candidates must be self-motivated, able to work independently, willing to learn, open minded, flexible, and not afraid to take initiative. Must have fluency in English - oral and written; fluency in other languages can be a plus

How to Apply: All applications must be submitted in English and should state clearly for which internship the application is submitted. Selections will be made on the basis of:
- A resume indicating education, relevant past activities and experience.
- A cover letter giving reasons for wanting to follow the programme.
- For the Disarmament and Human Rights internships: a 1000-1500 word essay about a current human rights or disarmament issue. Why does this issue interest you?
- Two recommendations from non-family members. Persons writing recommendations should indicate their relationship to the applicant and evaluate the candidate according to: her ability to take initiative in developing activities; her commitment to working for peace and justice; her skills in written and oral communication and her fluency in English; her maturity in working as part of a team. All recommendations are kept confidential.

Application Deadline: Varies with each specific internship

WILSON CENTER

Location: Washington, DC

Organization Description: The Wilson Center, chartered by Congress in 1968 as the official memorial to President Woodrow Wilson, is the nation’s key non-partisan policy forum for tackling global issues through independent research and open dialogue to inform actionable ideas for the policy community. At the Wilson Center, preeminent scholars and experts research topics of national and international relevance. Through public meetings and events, broadcast media and social media and a wide range of outreach activities, the Wilson Center is engaged in the global dialogue of ideas.

Job and Program Description: The Wilson Center offers a wide range of internship opportunities to current, recent, or returning college students. There are at least 80-90 interns at the Center at any given time. Availability of positions generally corresponds to the beginning of the fall, spring and summer terms. Most internships are unpaid. The Center has two different internship programs: Research Assistant Internships and Staff Assistant Internships with separate applications and deadlines. Many interns are research assistants for our visiting scholars, contributing directly to research on a wide range of projects. Other interns work in staff offices. The Center interns have the opportunity to develop both research and professional skills, and to participate in the numerous activities and events.

Duration: Internship appointments are generally consistent with academic calendars and last approximately 9-12 weeks. A research assistant typically works 12-15 hours a week per scholar and staff assistants typically work 10-20 hours a week. Staff Assistant Internships cannot exceed one year in duration.

Eligibility/Requirements: All internships generally require the following:

- At least a cumulative GPA of 3.0 (on a 4.0 scale) or equivalent from a non-U.S. institution
- Be a current undergraduate/graduate student, recent graduate (within one calendar year), or have been accepted to enter an advanced degree program (within the next year)
- Strong research and/or administrative skills, be detail-oriented, be able to work independently and collectively as part of group
- International programs might require working knowledge of a foreign language
- Valid work authorization in the United States

How to Apply: For Staff Assistant Internships, applications are only accepted through the specific job posting on the careers website.

For Research Assistant Internships, applicants will need to email the following in Word compatible or PDF documents in one complete email:

- A completed WWICS Internship Application Form
- Cover Letter (indicating academic interests or areas of interest)
- Current Resume (indicating relevant coursework)
- 3-5 page Writing Sample or excerpt of a recent research paper with separate Works Cited page
- 2 letters of recommendation highlighting the applicant’s writing, research, and/or language skills
- Transcripts (unofficial copies are acceptable); transcripts will be used to determine if the applicant has taken relevant course work so applicants should submit transcripts from all undergraduate and graduate institutions (if applicable)

Application Deadlines:

- For Staff Assistant Internships, deadlines vary with the specific job posting.
- For Research Assistant Internships, the deadlines are as follows:
  - Internships beginning in January – October 31
  - Internships beginning in June – March 31
  - Internships beginning in September – July 15
